Look into the light...

Today was Miranda's follow up appointment with the Pediatric Opthamologist, Dr. Fierson. I picked up Savannah from school at 1:30 and all of us zoomed up to Arcadia in about 45 minutes.

I packed snacks because I anticipated our wait would be a while. There was an insurance glitch so I had to pay a highter co-pay...not happy about that!! Our little wait turned into a long wait and the girls were being super stinkers. Finally after almost 2 hour they called us in. There were other people that had been waiting there for over 4 hours. It sucks...

Miranda did her eye test and then Dr. Fierson said her eyesight is improving with the 2 hour eyepatching and the eyeglasses. We need to continue that every day. He expressed the importance of her wearing her glasses and that the more she wore them the more her eyes would cross less and her eyesight would improve. He said she may wear glasses for years. Bummer!! He wants another follow up in 3 months. I need to take Amanda in a few months for a follow up so they will both get their follow ups on the same day, at the end of July.
