Amanda and Maryssa had Evaluations for Preschool

I took Amanda and Maryssa to the Public Preschool to be evaluated on Thursday May 28th.

Since Amanda is being followed by the school district as a possible special needs due to her disability with her right arm, they want to do a global evaluation, academically and physically. So Thursday we had it done. She was tested at a 3-1/2 to 4 year old level!! The preschool teachers and the school psychologist said they have never used some of the pages of the evaluations for a 2 year old before and were amazed. Way to go Amanda!! So she will not need speech therapy or Special Ed Kindergarten.

Maryssa got evaluated because she currently receives speech therapy once a week and the school district wanted to see if Maryssa would benefit from the Public Preschool that would offer her speech therapy. She tested much lower than Amanda in terms of receptive language which is processing and understanding language. She tested a little bit better in her expressive language than receptive language. Expressive language is how she communicates and talks. I am hoping she will receive speech therapy at the preschool because I think she will benefit greatly from it over a traditional preschool because of the smaller classroom size vs. a larger classroom size in a traditional preschool. Maryssa is such an adorable and darling sweetheart. She is just my precious!!

We have a follow up appointment on the results of their evaluations on June 10th.
