The Birthday party was a Splash!!

We celebrated The Triplets' 2nd birthday and Cliff's 50th birthday at our house with our close friends. There was a really cool water slide (Little Tikes Crashing Waves), a Sesame Street Bouncy House, a Jumpolene which is similar to a trampoline, and a couple of baby/toddler pools. It was so fun to see all 4 of my girls and all of their little friends have so much fun that day. I was just amazed to see my 4 little girls running and playing - they are little people now. Wow, I carried these precious babes in my belly and I have so many wonderful memories watching them all grow.

It was equally amazing to see my darling husband enjoy celebrating his huge accomplishment and what a triumph it is indeed to celebrate half a century!!

I made my famous Kimberladas, lasagna, a Mediterranean dish and some other yummy dishes for all of our friends to enjoy. It meant so much to us that they came to the party and celebrated with us.

Blues Clues dropped of special goodie bags for all of the kiddos. Cliff got a delectable chocolate cake that proudly displayed "50" and Happy Birthday Cliff. The triplets got their favorite character, Elmo on their cake. There were lots of candles to be blown out and it was so much fun.

Happy Birthday to the loves of my life. And my dear Savannah, I am looking forward to celebrating your birthday in March. I can't believe she will be turning 5.

I want to thank God for blessing me over and over. I am so grateful to Him for everything in my life and for showing me the way to Salvation.
