Today is the first day of Preschool for the Triplets

I drove up to the preschool and we were all excited!! The girls had their new first day of school outfits on and they all looked so adorable.

We walked into Mrs. Darling's classroom. What a wonderful name for their teacher...Darling!! She is truly darling and the girls and I really love her. The girls ran right to the toys and began playing with the other girls. There is only one boy in the class, Samuel, and he was out sick yesterday so the class was all girls yesterday.

The triplets will go Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 9am - 12pm. While they girls were in preschool yesterday, I ran home and sorted through and organized their toys. I donated 3 boxes of old toys that they have outgrown and we have more space for new toys. Tomorrow I will do a deep house clean and that will be nice!

I stayed for a few minutes to observe and the triplets didn't miss me at all. I shuffled out and watched through the window. They were playing nicely and enjoying themselves. I was so happy that they were so happy!!

Each parent revolves bringing snacks for the classroom. I have 3 times this months since I have three girls!! I thought themed snacks for my girls would be fun for the classroom. It will give the teacher an opportunity to play on the them with the snack them. I will make cheese sandwiches in the shape of fish (using a cookie cutter) and also bring fishie crackers for Amanda's snack day. For Miranda's snack day I will be doing apple shaped cheese sandwiches with slices of apples. For Maryssa's snack day I will bring in flower shaped sandwiches and also raisins so that they can decorate their flower sandwiches.

Cliff and I went to pick up the girls after school. At the end of the school day, the teacher puts their school work out for the parents to pick up. There is a pretty wrapped box with their name and decorated stickers all over to identity each child's school work. It was so cute to see 3 of the wrapped boxes for my girls.

The girls also get their own little cubbies to hold their little "quiet time" blanket and some extra clothes in case they need to change. They get quiet time and a book is ready to them while they lay down and relax for 10 minutes. Miranda and Amanda wouldn't lay down and ran around the classroom. The teacher asst. had to round them up and sit next to them to remind them that it was quiet time and they needed to lay down. This is going to take a little adjustment for the girls. They haven't done naps or quiet time in a year.

I really like this preschool. It is a private preschool at a Presbyterian Church and the girls will go to chapel every. They will be educated in a Christian background. Cliff and I are really happy about that.
