Drink it Savannah!!

This morning at 10am was Savannah's dentist appt. at Uncle Ned's in Manhattan Beach. It takes us about an hour to get there.

Savannah will be sedated so I was advised not to let her eat or drink before the procedure so there will be no complications with the sedation.

I brought some apple juice that she could swig down as she was drinking the sedation. She was being stubborn and wouldn't drink the sedation medication. Savannah hates to take medicine and it is always a fight with her. Finally I got her to take it.

About 15 minutes later, Savannah was getting goofy. It was hilarious!! She was like a little drunken 6 year old. She was giggly and everything was funny to her. She was ready to get her cavities taken care of. I carried her to the dentist chair and stayed with her a few minutes until Uncle Ned came in with the shot...then I skiddaddled!!

There was no screaming and she was in there for about an hour. Uncle Ned came out and told me she did great. Sedation is the way to go for Savannah. Well, actually, I hope we don't need to do sedation again because I don't want her to have anymore cavities.

I had to carry her to the car, the walk was about 2 blocks....whew!! The nurse came with me to help me with the triplets. I stopped off at a convenience store and got all of them lollipops. Savannah didn't quite know how to lick her lollipop...LOL!!
