First time at church for the girls

Up until now it has been an intimidating thought to attempt the difficult task for me to get the girls ready to go to church. Morning services are just too hard to get to on a timely manner.

Our church, Morningstar Christian Chapel, which is a non denominational affiliate Calvary Christian church, offers Wednesday evening services at 7:00pm and Sunday services at 6:00pm.

Today our church offered a 6:00pm Good Friday evening service. So I got the girls ready and we all went to church tonight.

Cliff and I took the triplets to their classroom and then we took Savannah to their classroom. It was all of the girls very first time attending their classrooms at church. They were all excited. There was a fun playground, they had lots of toys, art projects and a lesson taught about Good Friday representing the day Jesus died.

Cliff and I attended the church service and the sermon ministered by Pastor Jack Abaleen was so inspiring!! I teared up and felt the Spirit the whole time we were there. The songs we sang were beautiful and I felt the love of Jesus our Lord in me and all around us. It was His amazing Grace.

We are going to try to attend church weekly now. The girls are old enough now to learn about the teachings of Jesus and Christianity. I am so excited for them!! It will also be good for Cliff and I to attend services and get involved in the ministry as well.
