Gimme More Please!!

Today is our last day at Paradise Point. I don't want to leave...waaah!! I called the Front Desk and got to speak to Annette and she arranged for a late check out. Yay!!

The girls begged for more pool time and more beach time. So we spent a couple of hours playing on the beach and then headed over to the pool for a while.

Then I packed us all up. That was not fun. My 10lb pkg in 5lb bucket turned into a 20lb pkg in a 5lb bucket...yikes!! I crammed everything in and slowly crawled out of the Paradise Point. Please Gimme More of this resort. I love this place. I will be coming again for sure.

I decided I wanted to take the girls on a Harbor Cruise of San Diego Bay. So I used my handy dandy GPS Navigator (I know nickname it Navi) and it guided me to the Harbor. We purchased our tickets and were just in time for the next harbor cruise. What a breathtaking tour it was. There was a lot of fascinating facts and topics during the narration of our cruise. We all had a great time.

Cliff has been in Arkansas working on a water purification project. We miss him a lot. He called me just as we were driving out of the San Diego Harbor area. I told him we had a great time.

We did a quick stop drive thru at Del Taco and then headed up to Tustin, about 1/2 hours north of San Diego for a cook out family picnic with my multiple moms club.

We spent a few hours at the cook out and I won the 50/50 raffle! Just enough money to fill up the gas tank!! Yippee!!
