Hello Sea World!!

After we got up and had breakfast, we all got ready and headed out for Sea World. Little did I know from learning from my GPS Navigator in my handy dandy minivan, Paradise Point was only 1 mile from Sea World. Apparently, Paradise Point Resort is the closest resort property to Sea World. Well, what do ya know!

So a short drive over a bridge and in 4 minutes after leaving Paradise Point, we entered the Sea World parking lot. Totally convenient. More thumbs up for Paradise Point!!

Sea World has added some fun things for the kids. They now have a themed Elmo adventure park. It has all kinds of cool little rides and splash park for kids. We had a blast in there .

We headed over to the Shamu show. We opted to sit in the "soak" section. It was a hot day and we wanted to cool off. We enjoyed the show and didn't get wet at all.

We got to pet the dolphins but unfortunately we couldn't feed them since they are on a strict eating schedule of early morning hours before the park opens.

We decided to go watch the dolphin show. It was packed so the only seats available were in first row - yep you guessed it - the soaker row. Oh well, it was a hot day so we weren't too worried about it. Well, these cutsie little sweet dolphins faked us out!! We were surprised that they can splash just as much water as Shamo can!! We got S.O.A.K.E.D. We smelled like an aquarium - nice!!

The girls wanted to check out the Arctic area where the penguins were. That was nice.

I had to execture my promise to the girls to pick out a Sea World Toy. They all got cute Shamo squeakie toys. Boy, was that a noisy choice!!

At about 5:30pm we ventured out of Sea World and did some shopping to get some swim rings and pool paraphernalia. Then I swung by Subway for sandwiches for diner.

Then we headed back to the resort. At check-in yesterday, the front had told me that they today at 8:00pm were showcasing a Disney movie (Wall-E) on a large screen at the main pool. All of the kids could swim in the pool and watch the movie. The resort provided free smores, popcorn and movie. We hailed down the bell boy and he drove us to the pool. We had a lot of fun in the pool watching the movie and ate our sub sandwiches for dinner there.

Another perfect day in paradise...
