I have arrived to Paradise

This morning I felt like taking our new minivan onto the open road. Doggone it, if I am going to have car payments, I am going to enjoy driving my new hooptie!!

I have been fantasizing about staying at this resort called Paradise Point in San Diego. I had seen this resort previewed on the Jon & Kate Plus 8 show. The thing that impressed me was that if it was safe and good enough for the Gosselins multiples, by golly, it should be perfect for the Jones Multiples!!

Paradise Point is on its own island. It consists of dozens of acres of lush tropical surroundings, with 6 salt water pools and 4 of them are perfectly suitable for little kids. All of the accommodations are private bungalows and each offers its own little private grassy backyard with comfy Adirondack chairs and table on a nice sized patio. The most outstanding part of this property is that it is completely surrounded by beaches. Every bungalow is just steps away from the beach!! You have to check this little piece of heaven on earth...

I just so happen to be putting together a presentation as a guest speaker for both of my moms clubs on the subject of family travel within a radius of 2 hours from La Habra in Orange County. Paradise Point would be the perfect property for me to showcase for my presentation, especially for my multiple moms club.

I called Paradise Point at 10am this morning and spoke to Annette, the Manager of Reservations. I told her my interest in previewing and showcasing the resort for my guest speaker presentation. We negotiated a price for our stay at the Paradise Point. We have an awesome bungalow waiting for us. We will be there today through this Friday - yipee!! Look out

Have you ever seen a woman pack 10 pounds of stuff in a 5 pound bucket? Well, I sure did !! I packed all of the comforts of home for me and the girls- including a microwave for our food so we could have some easy heat up foods in our bungalow. It took me about 1 hour to pack and another hour to get the girls are ready and then we headed out to our vacation to paradise.

I used my handy dandy GPS navigator and it got us there perfectly. As we were driving up the driveway, it was just like being in Hawaii. There was so much attention paid to detail. Check-in at the lobby was easy breasy. We were met by the bell boy who asked if I needed any assistant. I was good to go but and thanked him anyway. Check this out. The bell boy has his own 8 seater golf cart mobile that will transport resort guests all over the property. He will also do errands around the property or whatever. Nothing is impossible for the bell boy - tip is the hook to get awesome service with the bell boy. We did use him to take us to the little store that they have on the property. Very convenient. I just phoned and they had the bell boy with his 8 seater ready to whisk us away. Totally cool dude!!

The Jones Girls

So we unpacked our stuff and headed out to the pool. It was the first time the triplets were in a deep pool. The pool was perfect because it had a gradual decline, so they could slowly walk into the pool. The jacuzzi was well loved by the girls too.

At night they had amazing fire pits blazing with flames. These fire pits were located around the 6 different pools. The fire pits looked so beautiful. They had tiki torches in every nook and cranny of the resort. It was like I was on the show survivor. The property welcomed people to roast marshmallows and make smores around the fire pit. How cool is that!! We went to the store (thanks bell boy) to purchase their signature smoores package which comes complete with long wooden sticks, marshmallows and the smoores fixins. Fun times at the fire pit - yes baby!!
