La Habra Children's Museum

I took the girls all by myself to the La Habra Children's Museum. They had an exhibit and a near lecture about "critters". The triplets couldn't sit still to hear lecture, but Savannah sat and listened contently. It was my 1st time letting all of the girls out of the stroller and play at the Museum. Some of my wonderful friends in my La Habra Mom's Club were there to lend a helping hand.

Today was fun and it seems to be getting a little easier taking the girls places as they get older. I am looking forward to the day when I can take all 4 girls out without a stroller and they can listen and follow my instructions while we are out.
