Maryssa is getting potty trained!!

Yesterday was Maryssa big official day to begin getting potty trained. She peed on the potty chair 3 times!! Yay!!

Her first time she was in the bathroom in the morning. I brought her a cup of milk and a book and she sat on the potty chair for an hour and then finally did her first pee pee. We all cried out for joy and she was so excited.

After we got home from the beach, we resumed potty training and put her on the potty each time after drinking fluids. She peed both times.

I am crossing my fingers that I can get her potty trained before early September so she can go to preschool. The preschool will only take potty trained kids.

I will use up the remaining diapers I have and then will move Maryssa sole onto Pull Ups.

This is my last baby to potty train. In some ways I am really ready to be done with the diapers. I have been dealing with diapers non-stop for over 5 years now, from Savannah through the triplets. It will be amazing to no longer have to do diapers anymore, but then that means no more babies to cuddle with while changing their diapers. Sort of bitter sweet, know what I mean?

Anyway, I am so proud of my darling, Princess Maryssa!! Way to go our little precious!!
