Numatic Engineering Christmas party

Today we went to Cliff's Christmas party at Numatic Engineering in Sun Valley. It is about a 1-1/2 drive from our house.

The girls wore the Christmas dresses that they wore for the ballet recital. Cliff had requested that they wear these dresses today. They all looked so pretty and Cliff was so proud of his beautiful family.

I baked 45 banana nut breads for all of the employees at Numatic Engineering. This is my annual tradition that I have been doing for them for 12 years now. Wow that is a long time!! They all look forward to it every year, especially the owner, Steve Leach.

They had a fun raffle and both Cliff and I won prizes. We won a $25 Gift certificate to Home Depot which we used to buy new vertical blinds for our den and we also won a gift certificate for Best Buy which we will use to buy Amanda's computer mouse which has a ball on it to help give her therapy for her thumb. Cliff received a gift certificate to Fry's Electronics - that is Cliff's favorite store and he can spend hours in there and thousands of dollars if I let him...LOL!!

They had a nice luncheon of croissant sandwiches with chips and salsa and cake for dessert. It was very nice and cozy.
