Party next door

We were invited to our neighbor's 1st birthday party for their baby girls Paige, AKA Squishy Cookie. This baby girl is the cutest little thing.

The weather started out nice. We had lunch at their house and the girls played in the yard with the other kids. Then the looming dark grey clouds attacked our party!! I mean really, the weather is so unpredictable in Vermont. One minute the sun is out, the next minute it feels like you are in a crazy storm of the century.

So of course those huge boulder rain drops came upon us and in 2.2 seconds everybody ran for cover. Thank goodness our house was next door. It rained like the dickens for a few hours. Then when it cleared up we ventured outside again. Then at bedtime, around 9pm, the clouds came back and argued with anger as we heard the loud thunder and lightening for hours and hours that night. There is nothing like a summer storm in New England.
