Shamu Rocks!!

One neat thing that Sea World is offering is when you buy a ticket, you can go as much as you want till the end of the year. So this meant we could go again and again. We decided we would go back to Sea World in the early evening.

We spent the day enjoying the beach. The girls grabbed their sand shovel kits and we walked to the beach...all of about 20 steps and we were on the beach from our bungalow. It can't get better than this.

The sand was so soft. We went out to the water and it was amazing. The water was shallow to our calves for about 20 feet or so. It was the perfect beach for us. We walked along the beach collecting different shells and they learned about all of the different sea kelp and sea weed. I showed them the little holes in the wet sand were made by tiny sea crabs. They made sand castles and met little friends and helped them make their sand castles even bigger. It was just beautiful.

We ventured over to the jacuzzi for a bit then headed to our bungalow for showers and change of clothes. We headed out to Sea World at 6:45pm.

At 7:45pm we found ourselves at Shamu's stadium anxiously awaiting to see a neat night time show called Shamu Rocks! We stayed away from the soaker seats...LOL!!

Afterwards we enjoyed some neat nighttime entertainment called Summer Nights. That was fun and amazing to see.

We then visited some fish exhibits and by 9:45pm we headed back to our bungalow.

Another beautiful day in paradise...
