We are off to Boston...just mommy and her girls!

Originally we all were supposed to fly back home from Boston on July 21st, but Cliff had to fly back home to go back to work. He could only take 2 weeks off from work. We were able to change his ticket free, but our tickets would have run us at least $600 plus any increased airfare rate. So I decided the girls and I would stay in Boston from the day we dropped Cliff off (today) and stay till July 21st.

I have lots of friends in Boston that belong to my online motherhood board. So I planned to spend some time with my friends who all have the same aged kids as I do!

Thankfully my dear friends, Cheryl and Lee, who stayed with us in Vermont last summer for a few days on vacation, spent some time with us and showed us their beautiful town of Boston.

I am so grateful and thankful to Cheryl and Lee for spending time with us and showing us around. Thank you thank you!!

Cliff and all of us dropped by Cheryl and Lee's for a quick visit. We had a nice time! Then Lee joined us on the drive to the Boston airport, about 20 minutes from their place.

We dropped off Cliff and then I drove Lee back home. Then I used the GPS and we drove from the airport up to our hotel, The Marriott Residence Inn at Woburn. Lee helped me get the car unpacked and moved into our room. This place was great! They have daily FREE complete and amazing breakfasts. They also offer free dinner M-Thurs. Free internet and fabulous indoor pool. Our room was really nice too with a complete kitchen, mini dining room living room and even a full sized fridge and freezer. Totally perfect for us! There is even a Target close by and I shopped there for a bunch of stuff for us.

We drove Lee back to his house in So I checked in Malvern then on the way back to Woburn Marriott I stopped at McDonald's and got the girls dinner.

I got us all unpacked and got the laptop hooked up. The girls loved Nickelodeon and each night I gave them special toys that I had purchased as a fun thing for them to look forward to at bed time.
