We went to Red Robin yesterday

I planned a really fun field trip for my girls and for the La Habra Moms Club. We had a huge turnout - about 26 kids and 15 moms. We went to Red Robin, a restaurant that specializes in gourmet hamburgers and good food fare.

I arranged to have each child get a tour of the kitchen and how the restaurant operates, work with the chef to make their very own made to order burger, and then they all received all sorts of goodies like free gift certificates, keepsake cups, coloring books and crayons.

They had a private room all decorated for us. There were balloons tied to each child's chair. It looked amazing!!

Poor Maryssa was so wiped out and fell asleep eating her burger while sitting in the booth with the other girls. I had to lay her down on the bench in the booth. The event started at 2pm and my girls got to sit down and eat at about 3:15pm so I guess Maryssa needed to take a catnap - LOL!!

The kids got to sit down and have lots of socializing with each other while enjoying their full burger meal with fries and a drink for a negotiated discount price of $3 a kid. Each mom ordered their own lunch. I negotiated some free kids meal coupons so I was able to get my girls and my burger meal free. I thought they were very gracious to our La Habra Moms Club.

Some interesting facts that I learned from our host that gave us the tour of Red Robin - the 1st Red Robin opened up in Seattle, WA in 1969. They now have over 500 restaurants nationwide.

The big informative fact that I learned is that they use FRESH ground beef daily - never frozen. They chop their vegetables fresh every morning for each day. They hand slice their cheese and luncheon meat with an electric slicer. It doesn't get better than this and for now on I will be supporting Red Robin and recommending them to everyone for a good and wholesome meal.
